1. Sachsenwerk-Radeberg was formerly a part of SAG Kabel but was returned to German ownership in May 1952. The last Russian General-director was (fnu) Bondin. The only Russian known by name who deals with Sachsenwerk-Radeberg now is (fnu) Krukov. Krukov accepts television sets which the plant is producing for the USSR.

2. About 12 Soviet officers have been noticed coming regularly to the plant to accept the large decimeter voice transmitter being made by Sachsenwerk-Radeberg. It is believed that they have their office in Dresden; their names are unknown. Each such communications apparatus consists of three trucks, each a three-axle ZIS-150. The Soviet officers drive the trucks away to an unknown destination. The sets are usually referred to at the plant as "The Big Set". Production of this equipment comes under the critical items (Schwerpunkt) program. The sets are limited to oral transmission of messages and have no sending key. The East German Volkspolizei will reportedly receive a number of the sets.
